SHAKSPEARE.

A PASSION for ſlander, has been repreſented by many diſultory writers as peculiar to our ſex: With how much juſtice, I will leave for the honeſt hearted to judge. That there may exiſt ſome among us, whom Satan has taught the art of diſſecting characters, I'll admit; but I verily believe, we are more injured in that way, by the malevolent ſpirits of the other ſex than our own. The mortification of a delicate female muſt be redoubled when ſhe reflects, that her reputation has been traduced before a company of men, in a bar-room or coffee-houſe. This idea pierces the very ſoul,—while tea table aſperſions fly off like ſteam from the ſaucer, only giving a momentary warmth, or by means of detection, rebound to the authoreſs.

In a late excurſion, from the ſweet rural ſpot I call my home, to the reſidence of the amiable Lucella, who poſſeſſes

"A body faultleſs
And a mind informed,"

I was more than ever convinced of the truth of what I have written. On my entrance I was conducted without ceremony by the maid to the apartment of her miſtreſs. Her lovely head reclined upon her hand, and the damaſk blown on her cheek, by the fragrant breath of nature, were wet with the dew of ſenſibility. "From whence theſe tears, my frieud?" enquired I—Has cruel death torn from thy embrace ſome loved companion—ſome valued friend? Tell me Lucella.—My ſpeech failed, a tear of ſympathy had found a ready road to the vicinity of my chin, and another ſtood trembling in my eye, when Lucella, wiping hers away, replied. "Thy dear dear girl, the beſt of friends, is deeply wounded---my reputation has been ſtabbed. Thou knoweſt the black ſoul of Malignus. I had the misfortune a fortnight ago at an aſſembly to prefer the worthy Henry for a partner, and I hear that Malignus has ſince induſtriouſly circulated the moſt infamous falſehoods, of me thro'out L——, where I am perſonally a ſtranger." Unwilling any more pearly drops ſhould fall to glut the revenge of ſo baſe an animal, I replied, ſmiling "Oh, if that be all, ſtop the briny torrent, be comforted with conſcious rectitude, the wound is not mortal, thy numerous and reſpectable friends, will ſedulouſly heal it with the infalliable balm of truth, the aſſaſſin ſhall be detected and condignly puniſhed.

Malignus is poſſeſſed of a graceful figure, fine black eyes, brows arched, good teeth, and tongue curiouſly poliſhed with the Hibernian varniſh,

"But ill his ſoul ſupplies a form ſo fair."

The prudent and thoughtful of our ſex avoid him as they would any other venomous reptile: but the vacant mind is ſometimes taken with his flowing accents and graceful manners, while he

"Twiſts round their heart ſtrings
And with viper fold's entwining,
Stings the fools who" ſmile on him.

In company with his male companions he is eternally boaſting of favors from the ladies which he has never received, not ſparing thoſe for whom he profeſſes the ſincereſt friendſhip, nay, ſome of his near relations have not eſcaped his calumnies.

O paſſi graviora! dait Deus his quoque finem.

Mittite; for ſan et hac olim meminiſſe juvabit."

IMITATED.

——"The pious chief
With cheerful words allay'd the common grief;
Endure and and conquer; Jove will ſoon diſpoſe
To future good, our paſt and preſent woes.
With me, the rocks of Scylla you have try'd;
Th' inhuman Cyclops, and his den defy'd.
What greater ills hereafter can you bear?
Reſume your courage, and diſmiſs your care.

DRYDEN.

EVERY day's experience moſt clearly informs us, that the enjoyments of the preſent life are fleeting and precarious:—Objects the moſt pleaſing in nature are defective, and delight but a momentary ſpace. The blooming roſe, unconnected with the prickly thorn, would be a ſight unparalelled. Mingled is every cup of pleaſure with ſome bitter dreg.

The melodious trills of the feathered ſongſter, the purling falls of the meandering ſtream, nay, the ſoothing ſtreams of a MADAM, oftentimes impreſs the mind with melancholy ſenſations. Friends, in whom thoſe virtues center that render them endearing to ſociety, we are often called to part with,

Often are the tender threads on which their Precious lives ſuſpended hang, cut by the Cruel hand of death—pale as the ſnowy
Top of Ida's mount, and wither'd as
A tender plant, nipt by ſome untimely
Froſt, and ſcorch'd by a ſummer's ſun—
Cold as a ſhapeleſs lump of clay, with blood
Thick clotted in their veins, a hideous,
Spectacle they lie.———

Although we are not yet far advanced beyond the threſhold of life, yet we have ſenſibly experienced the deluſions of a tranſitory world. Every ſubject which the eye beholds, and indeed every particle of matter, is a leſſon for our improvement. There is not an object in nature, nor the minuteſt atom of duſt, that is not continually changing from one ſtate to another.

But lowly indeed muſt that ſituation be, which affords not a ſingly ray of comfort; for the thorns of life are intermingled with fragrant flowers. The children of affliction ought not to deſpair, and preſume, that their ill fortune in this world is inſupportable. Should the good things of this life be denied them, ſhould ſick beds and confinement be their lot, and woes on woes in quick ſucceſſion follow after; yet for them ſweet hope adminiſters relief---for them there is a balm o. Gilead.

To paſs a life of tranquility---to enjoy the SWEET and not the BITTER, much depends on the cultivation of the natural intellect. This is a ſentiment ſo true, that it ought early to be inculcated, and impreſſed on the minds of youth, that they may be guarded from wayward paths of the fooliſh and inconſiderate, and not be led away by every ingnusfatuus.

A mind, when cultivated by a ſkilful hand, when purified of thoſe baneful weeds, which ſpontaneouſly grow and check the riſe of virtue, is a pearl of great worth, a treaſure that cannot be corrupted nor bribed, by the intrigues of artful and inſinuating men.

It is an axiom worthy of all acceptation, that thoſe nations which are moſt refined in the liberal arts and ſciences, are the moſt flouriſhing and happy. "Science is that acquiſition, which irradiates the mind," and calls into vibration thoſe finer feelings, which render ſociety engaging.

Beata terque beata terra, ubi ſcientia regnat.

Since the cultivation of the natural intellect is ſo highly conſequential, an opportunity for the expanſion of the mind is more to be valued than Peruvian ore, or the fineſt tinſel of gold. "Objects decaying---time flying---bells tolling---friends dying---heaven inviting" call on us with more than parental authority—with eloquence far more than human, to fill our time with duty, and be mindful of our diſſolution.

To be inattentive to the means of improvement, to our own intereſt, and to the intereſt of ſociety; and neglect thoſe talents that were given us by the GOD of nature, and the enhancement of the ſum of human felicity, are crimes which will be regiſtered in heaven, and which muſt ſurely be anſwered at ſome future period.

"Revocate animos."

CONTINUATION OF ## Late Foreign Intelligence.

DEAL, Aug. 14.

Lord Nelſon's Expedition.

This morning at ten o'clock, admiral lord Nelſon, in the Meduſa, accompanied by the revenue cutters, Diſcovery bomb, &c, ſailed from the Downs. Theſe veſſels have all of them flat-bottomed boats on board. The Leyden, of 64 guns, arrived in the Downs from Margate roads; is now, four o'clock, taking on board flat-bottomed boats, and immediately proceeds to join lord Nelſon. Yeſterday evening the flat-bottomed boats, were manned, and manœuvred in the Downs. Sham firing at times took place from them to make the men perfect in caſe they may be made uſe of. Lord Nelſon has not been aſhore ſince his arrival in the Meduſa.

(Another letter.)

Lord Nelſon ſailed from the Downs this morning, at half paſt nine, but was accompanied only by three bomb veſſels, and ſeven or eight cutters, ſo that he muſt have ſailed for ſome rendezvous to receive reinforcements, before making any attempt upon the enemy. From his having gone round the ſouth head of the Goodwin, it is conjectured that he is deſtined for Boulogne, but this is a very uncertain gueſs; for as the wind is from the north weſt, he could not readily have gone round the other head of the ſand, whatever might be his deſtination.

DOVER, Aug. 14.—Half paſt 2 P. M.

Lord Nelſon paſſed this place about 12, and his deſtination is now plainly perceived to be Boulogne, off which place he probably is at this time, though the weather is not clear enough to afford a view of this ſquadron, as the wind is ſtill from the N. W. and very moderate.

(Another letter, ſame date.)

We have again been gratified with a ſight of lord Nelſon's fleet, which, between 9 and 10 this morning, was ſeen ſtanding acroſs under a preſs of ſail for Boulogne Roads. A number of revenue cruiſers, and ſeveral bomb & gun-veſſels were with his fleet, and all of them had flat-bottomed boats with them. It is ſaid the attack on the French gun-boats is to be renewed, as they have become daring ſince his lordſhip's laſt viſit; a conſiderable number of them have been lying at anchor all along the coaſt from Blank Ney to Boulogne harbour yeſterday and to-day. We expect ſome intereſting accounts to-morrow, and ſeveral perſons are gone off to be preſent at the attack. An expreſs arrived from his lordſhip to the Ordnance Office here, yeſterday for a ſupply of ammunition; and large quantities, including ſeveral hundred live ſhells, were immediately ſent to the Downs.

A flag of truce arrived and one ſailed this morning. The former, contrary to the regulation, came into the harbour, it being dark; But the inſtant it was known ſhe was ordered out, and ſent back. No paſſage veſſels paſs, and the prohibition againſt perſons landing here from France, continues to be ſtrictly enforced.

Half paſt 5.

A cutter is now ſeen coming from the fleet and ſteering for the Downs; but nothing important could have happened when ſhe left the fleet.

Aug. 14.—Half poſt eleven.

Lord Nelſon is now in ſight, in the Meduſa frigate, attended by two bombs, three gun-brigs, and ten cutters, ſtanding for Boulogne Bay, with a preſs of ſail, and a fine breeze at Eaſt: they have between 20 and 30 flat-bottomed boats on board the different veſſels. The enemy made a move laſt night, and moored 26 gun-veſſels, chiefly ſchooner and lugger-rigged, along the ſhore to the eaſtward, and weſtward of the harbour; and by a private account received here by a relation of one of our townſmen at Boulogne, we learn that 17,000 troops arrived there from the interior two or three days ago—Every thing indicates that an attack will be made ſoon on their line of defence if they do not remove it.

LEGHORN, July 24.

Every thing is at preſent in motion here for the purpoſe of reinforcing the troops employed in the ſiege of Porto Ferrajo, ſo as to compel that place to ſurrender. Eight privateers are fitted out to ſerve as tranſports, and to act offenſively againſt the enemy. The beſiegers have been ſupplied with proviſions, ammunition and ſome heavy artillery. It is the diviſion of Vatrin which carries on the ſiege of Porto Ferrajo. Gen. Vatrin ſet off yeſterday to ſuperintend the operations. It is not true that an Engliſh ſquadron has appeared off Porto Ferrajo. The only Engliſh veſſel ſeen there was the Roſe cutter, the commander of which, after ſome communication with the chiefs of the city, proceeded on his deſtination.

VERONA, July 29.

Yeſterday the patriots who for upwards of a year were confined in the priſon of the caſtle of Cattaro, arrived at this place. They were received by the National Guard under arms, and were drawn by the people in two triumphal chariots. They were greeted by the multitude with reiterated ſhouts of "long live the patriots, long live the Republic!" There are only 37 of them, one having periſhed in confinement.

TURIN, July 30.

The following proclamation has, in conſequence of the late diſturbances, been addreſſed by generals Jourdan and Merle to the French troops here in garriſon:—

"SOLDIERS!

"You demanded your pay, and you have received it. Your grievances are at an end; and any further ſignification of diſcontent would be a crime which would draw upon you the puniſhment of the French government. Agitators with guilty intentions are now digging the mine in which they hope to overwhelm you. Hear your leaders; hear the voice of honour! hear Buonaparte, who thro' us, thus addreſſes you:—"Soldiers!" he ſays, "whoſe courage has fixed the admiration of all Europe, who have acquired rights to the gratitude of your country—Soldiers! you have erred: Beware! But one ſtep farther—and you are rebels---enemies to the Republic. The army---the nation---have their eyes upon you. One ſtep farther---and you are diſhonoured! Your laurels are tarniſhed. You are no longer the children of your country."

"Soldiers! we would gladly hope that this language would awake in your breaſts thoſe ſentiments of honour which have ever diſtinguiſhed the defenders of your country---that you will efface by future ſubmiſſion to your chiefs the remembrance of the events which are paſt; but had the ſpirit of inſubordination proceeded to ſuch lengths as to render other motives neceſſary, we ſhould have ſaid---Soldiers! recollect, that in the 7th year of the Republic, the enemy took advantage of the diſorders of our retreat, and the fields of Italy were deluged with the blood of our comrades in arms. The French government pardoned the leaders of that inſurrection. Its generoſity, however, could not command their gratitude. They ſtill cheriſh a ſpirit of hatred and revenge againſt the French. They are even now almoſt ready to carry into effect their guilty purpoſes.

"Soldiers! while you are ready to riſe in tumults againſt your commanders, they are, on the other hand, watching for your good. The greateſt dangers now ſurround you. A great conſpiracy is formed againſt you. The conſpirators know, that in union with your chiefs, you are invincible. They excite you to inſurrection, and watch the moment to aſſaſſinate your officers, with all the agents and the friends of the French government. They will then attack you; when, without leaders, and ſtung with remorſe, you muſt eaſily fall before them.

"Soldiers! this ſtatement is diſtreſſing, but it is true. Every conſideration requires your immediate return to your duty. Swear fidelity and obedience to your commanders, as they engage with due care for your ſafety and your wants."

This proclamation is to be printed and read at the head of every company.

(Signed) JOURDAN,
MERLE.

PARIS, Auguſt 7.

At day-break on the 4th inſt. admiral lord Nelſon, with 30 ſhips of war of various ſizes, appeared before Boulogne. A diviſion of our light flotilla was at anchor at the diſtance of about 500 fathoms beyond the mouth of the harbour. Its three ſub-diviſions were placed cloſe together, without any interval between either the 1ſt and the 2d, or the 2d and the 3d. A firing was commenced from the Britiſh bomb-veſſels, and briſkly returned by ours; but the enemy kept at the diſtance of 1900 fathoms from our line. The Britiſh made ſeveral attempts to advance. Our ſoldiers then aſked leave to go on board the three sub-divisions. The other divisions of the flotilla were also in readiness to support the van division. The flotilla kept up a brisk and uninterrupted fire, so that by noon, the enemy were obliged to retire to their first position, beyond the range of our guns. But they continued a discharge of their bombs. In the course of the day they threw above 900. Not a single person was either killed or wounded on our side. Two of our gun-boats were damaged, but so slightly that they were the next morning completely repaired. In the morning of the 5th the British fleet sheered off. Had the weather been calm, rear-admiral La Touche might have done them more mischief. The British admiral's intention was to force our van division, and to enter our harbour. He has failed in it. This engagement took place within sight both of the French and British shores. It is the first of this nature that has happened. Its consequences may render it more important than any circumstances with which it was immediately attended, in the estimation of posterity.——MONITEUR.

LONDON, Aug. 16.

We learn from Hungary, that two thirds of the town of Gyula has been reduced to ashes. The three churches, Catholic, Greek and Protestant, the buildings destined for the assemblies of the state, the new castle, the superb mills, the great town brewery, in a word, all the principal edifices were enveloped in flames. In the beginning of the fire every person endeavored to secure a portion of their effects; the streets, and even the cellers were instantly filled, but such was the strength and rapidity of the flames, that scarce a single article escaped.

The king of Persia had undertaken a journey to Tauris, a distance of 300 miles from Ispahan. This place carries on a prodigious trade in cotton, cloth, silks, gold and silver brocades, and fine shawls. It is seated in a delightful plain, surrounded by mountains, whence a stream proceeds, which runs through the city. The king's visit is said to be occasioned by some commercial matters which require regulation.

The Gazette contains an order in council, dated the 30th ult. declaring the port of La Valette, in the island of Malta, a free port, allowing the same drawbacks and bounties as are allowed on the exportation of various articles to Minorca and Gibraltar.

[The Hamburgh Mail.]

The Russian court has sent a circular letter to all its diplomatic ministers and agent, apprizing them that the Emperor is willing to renew the usual course of connection with the French Government; and that it is no longer proper his ambassadors should continue to observe any distance towards the Ambassadors of the Republic.

The pay of the Imperial troops is to be raised two kreutzers per day.

Note presented by Citizen Becher, Charge d'Affaires at the Imperial Diet to the Directorial Minister of Mentz:—Extract of a dispatch from the minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic, dated Paris, July 14 1801, to Citizen Batcher.

"You will complain to the Diet, that the English are procuring recruits in every part of the empire; a proceeding which is manifestly contrary to the spirit & text of the treaty of Luneville: and you will insist that the most vigorous measures be taken to prevent such illicit recruiting.

(Signed) CAILLARD."

The Russian Minister at Berlin, in conjunction with lord Carysfort, has delivered a memorial, insisting upon the evacuation of Hanover. The King of Prussia, it is reported, is resolved to keep the Electorate as a pledge, until the definitive settlement of the affairs of the Empire.

NEW WAR IN INDIA.

Head quarters of the Mysore Army, December 15.

We expected that the defeat of Doondeah would have terminated our toils, and that we should have been allowed leisure to recover from the extraordinary fatigue to which that bold adventurer had subjected us; but it seems we are doomed to a perpetuity of warfare, and that the suppression of one enemy is but the signal for some new opponent to start into the lists.

We are under orders to march against the Cotiote Rajah. I do not know the entire occasion of hostilities, but from the extraordinary natural and artificial defences of the country, and the extensive preparations of the enemy, we are to look for more than common hardships.

Col. Stevenson succeeded to the command in the Mysore on the 20th ult. when Colonel Wellesley, our late very gallant leader, departed for the Carnatic, on his route to Egypt.

This army is to be at Seringapatam on the 20th inst. and after a halt of three days proceeds to Cotiote; a detachment from Bombay is to co-operate with us, and will, to a certain extent, influence our movements.

The enemy's country is excellently adapted to offensive warfare, abounding in fastnesses, and covered to such extent with jungle, that an invading army is subject to incessant fire almost without knowing from whence it issues; the Rajah too is known to have been long preparing for the war he has provoked.

Since the monsoon, the weather has been fine, but rather cold, which is stated to have occasioned much sickness in different parts of the country, but our army is tolerably healthy.

BOSTON, September 23.

Arrived ship John, Morley, AuxCayes; sch'r Three Brothers, Hodge, Antigua; snow Fox, Sawyer, St. Croix; all discharged from Quarantine.

Thursday, brig Atlas, Kimball, Lisbon. August 27, spoke ship Swanwick, Kirkbride, from Philadelphia for Liverpool, out 16 days. Sept. 7, spoke brig Thomas, Hawes, from Oporto for New-York, Sept. 20, on Grand Bank, spoke sch'r Ruthy, Doane, of Boston for Cape Cod. Left at Lisbon, August 5, ship Henry, Rogers, of New-York; Harry, Boyd, of Philadelphia; barque Mary, Parrot, of Portsmouth; brig Sukey, and Betsey Cook, Salem; Seaflower, Williams, Boston; Ramble, Pease, do. brig Isabella, Bumbacy, of Baltimore, who, in lat. 42, long. 31, spoke ship Traveller, Billups, of Baltimore, for Oporto, very leaky.

SALEM, September 21.

Arrived at the Quarantine Ground the brigantine Speedwell, capt. John Fillebrown, 39 days from New Orleans. Left there, the brig Lyon of Portland, Thomas Norton, master, to sail in 4 days for the Havanna; brig Hunter, of New-York, capt. Daniel Coats, to sail in 3 days for the West-Indies; ship Hiram, of Savannah, to sail in 12 days for New-York; and several others names not recollected. Coming down the Mississippi, saw the brig ——, capt. King, 54 days from Bordeaux, in ballast, bound up, with 6 or 7 other vessels. On the 17th August, sailed from Balise in company with the brig Dispatch, capt. Bell, of and for Philadelphia; sloop Liberty, captain Johnson, of the same place bound to the West-Indies; and the sloop Two Brothers, capt. Thomas Baker, of and for Wilmington, (Del.) On the 4th of September, was boarded by the British sloop of war Ceres, capt. Woolly, (treated politely) bound to Jamaica, having in company two brigs, the Washington and Columbia, from Port au Prince bound to Charleston; a few days before she had captured the sch'r Polly, of Wiscasset, capt. Otis, from and bound to the same places. The captains of these vessels, on board the sloop, informed capt. Fillebrown, that capt. Wooley would not inform them what his plea was for taking them. The American captains on board the sloop of war informed, that they left at Port au Prince, captains Very and Lamson, of Salem, between the 10th and 15th of August, to sail in a few days.

NEW-YORK, September 29.

The Bordeaux papers by the sch'r William, arrived here yesterday, are to the 25th Thermidor (14th Aug.); but they contain nothing of moment.

A French gentleman who came passenger in the above sch'r, informs us, that Gantheaume had returned to Toulon, after landing 8,000 troops in Egypt—another gentleman in the same vessel, mentions his having landed 7,000. We believe that neither of the statements are accurate. In France as well as in Great Britain, the publications respecting Gantheaume, have been various and contradictory—The presumption therefore is, that no correct information had been published on this subject, at the date of our last advices.

A third passenger mentions, that he read in a French paper an account of a victory over the English in Egypt, which states that the English were so completely ROUTED, that they re-embarked, and had sailed for England.

PHILADELPHIA, October 1.

Last evening arrived the ship Lavinia, capt. Gardner, from Hamburgh, in 47 days passage. Capt. G. politely handed us the Hamburgh papers as late as the 11th of Aug. but they contain nothing new, as the accounts are anticipated by the arrivals some days since at New-York.

The Lavinia performed her voyage to and from Hamburgh in 4 months.

Arrived, ship Lavinia, Gardner, Hamburgh; brig Molly, Huggins, Hamburgh; Fame, Labbereen, Porto Rico; Dispatch, Bell, New-Orleans; Sloop Sisters, Lefort, Nottingham, (M.)

Cleared, sch'r Hope, Winslow, Nassau; Dove, Gilmore, P. Republican; Fair-American, Franklin, New-York; sloop Maria, Williamson, Nassau.

Capt. Gardner left Hamburgh the 12th, and Cuxhaven the 14th Aug.

At Hamburgh, ship Eliza, Rea, of and for this port, in 12 days; snow William, Quandrille, do. 14 days.

The ship Planter, Jacobs, sailed 2 days before the Lavinia, and ship Tom, Turner, with the brig Aristides, Sherman, about 7 days. Brig Jane, Taylor, for St. Domingo, sailed from Hambro' early in August.

A ship and a brig below, names unknown.

Brig Fair American, Chamoch, from hence, has arrived at St. Kitts.

Capt. Huggins of the Molly, spoke in lat. 42, long. 37 30, brig Dolphin, Johnson, 27 days out from Liverpool, bound to Charleston.

BALTIMORE, September 30.

Arrived, ship Chesapeak, 6 days from New-York.

Brig Apollo, captain Walker, 83 days from Newry, and 9 from Norfolk.

Sch'r Thomas, capt. Boden, 28 days from Port Republican. Left there the sch'r president, capt. M'Corkle of Baltimore; the brig Eliza Ann, capt. Rice of New-York, sailed with the Thomas. Off the Mole, spoke the sch'r Lydia, captain ——of New-York, bound to Jamaica. Off Cape Henry, saw a sch'r which we took to be the Barbara.

October 1.

Arrived ship Montezuma, capt. Dashield, 40 days from Rotterdam.

Left there three Boston sch'r's names unknown. Spoke nothing.

Alexandria Advertiser.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 3.

Yesterday in the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia for Washington county, the Grand Jury returned the bill of indictment against the Editor of the National Intelligencer, charged with a libel against the Judiciary of the United States, IGNORAMUS.

Copy of a letter from colonel Forsman, late of Baltimore, received by captain Dashield, on his passage down the channel.

CAPTAIN DASHIELD,

You may inform, if asked, that the treaty with France, is finally ratified on the part of the French Republic. That the Tripolitan squadron is now out cruising in the Mediterranean, and it is thought will extend their cruise as far as Lisbon, of which our ships should be apprized. That by a pilot who spoke us off Dover, we were informed that a British squadron on the 14th or 15th August, under command of admiral Nelson, had a second time bombarded the town and harbor of Boulogne—that they had possessed themselves of the gun boats, which was their object, but when they attempted to move them they discovered they were chained to their keels and could not effect it; by this unexpected circumstance they were much exposed to the fire of batteries, and in their retreat suffered a heavy loss, by their own account, 3 or 400 men.

A letter from Lisbon, Aug. 4, (received at Boston) mentions, that "capt. Bunbury, from Baltimore, spoke the Washington, from Leghorn for Hamburg, the capt. informed that the frigate Philadelphia, continued cruising between Capes Spartel and Trafalgar; and the Essex off Cape de Gatt. Cadiz and Malaga are healthy. Freight fallen, but still high. Gibraltar is still considered as in a state of blockade by the Spaniards. Capt. Lovell is here in a ship from Malaga, 25 days."
